1. Start a blog

A blog is a great way to share your writing, photos, videos, or other creative work with the world. It's also a great way to connect with other creatives and build a community of followers.

If you're not sure what to write about, start by sharing your thoughts on your favorite books, movies, or music. You can also share your own creative work, such as poems, short stories, or paintings.

Once you've started a blog, be sure to promote it on social media and other online platforms. You can also submit your blog posts to directories and search engines to help people find your work.

2. Create a website

A website is a more permanent home for your creative work than a blog. It's also a great way to showcase your work in a professional way.

When creating a website, be sure to include a portfolio of your best work. You can also include a blog, a contact form, and social media links.

Once you've created a website, be sure to promote it on social media and other online platforms. You can also submit your website to directories and search engines to help people find your work.

3. Start a podcast

A podcast is a great way to share your thoughts and ideas with the world. It's also a great way to connect with other creatives and build a community of followers.

If you're not sure what to talk about on your podcast, start by interviewing other creatives. You can also share your own creative work, such as poetry, short stories, or music.

Once you've started a podcast, be sure to promote it on social media and other online platforms. You can also submit your podcast to directories and search engines to help people find your work.

4. Create a YouTube channel

YouTube is a great platform for sharing videos of your creative work. It's also a great way to connect with other creatives and build a community of followers.

If you're not sure what to create videos about, start by sharing your thoughts on your favorite books, movies, or music. You can also share your own creative work, such as short films, music videos, or tutorials.

Once you've created a YouTube channel, be sure to promote it on social media and other online platforms. You can also submit your videos to directories and search engines to help people find your work.

5. Create a social media presence

Social media is a great way to connect with other creatives and build a community of followers. It's also a great way to share your work and get discovered.

When creating a social media presence, be sure to choose platforms that are relevant to your creative work. For example, if you're a writer, you might want to focus on Twitter and Facebook. If you're a visual artist, you might want to focus on Instagram and Pinterest.

Once you've created a social media presence, be sure to post regularly and engage with your followers. You can also use social media to promote your work and get discovered.

6. Join online communities

There are many online communities for creatives. These communities are a great way to connect with other creatives, share your work, and get feedback.

When joining an online community, be sure to introduce yourself and your work. You can also participate in discussions and share your thoughts and ideas.

By being active in online communities, you can build a network of supportive creatives who can help you get discovered.

7. Attend creative events

Creative events are a great way to meet other creatives, share your work, and get discovered. These events can include workshops, conferences, and exhibitions.

When attending a creative event, be sure to bring some of your work to share. You can also participate in discussions and networking events.

By attending creative events, you can meet other creatives who can help you get discovered.

8. Submit your work to magazines and journals

Many magazines and journals publish work by emerging creatives. Submitting your work to these publications is a great way to get your work seen by a wider audience.

When submitting your work, be sure to follow the submission guidelines carefully. You should also make sure that your work is of high quality and relevant to the publication's target audience.

By submitting your work to magazines and journals, you can get your work seen by a wider audience and get discovered.

9. Sell your work online

There are many ways to sell your creative work online. You can sell your work on your own website, through online marketplaces, or through social media.

When selling your work online, be sure to price your work competitively and provide clear and accurate descriptions of your products. You should also make sure that your checkout process is secure and easy to use.

By selling your work online, you can reach a global audience and get discovered.

10. Teach your craft

Teaching your craft is a great way to share your knowledge and skills with others. It's also a great way to get discovered and build a community of followers.

You can teach your craft through workshops, classes, or online courses. You can also share your knowledge and skills through blog posts, articles, or videos.

By teaching your craft, you can help others learn and grow, and you can also get discovered and build a community of followers.
