The concept of baptism in liquid fire has been around for centuries. It is found in ancient texts, such as the Bible and the Upanishads. In these texts, fire is often seen as a symbol of transformation and purification.

In modern times, the practice of baptism in liquid fire has been revived by a number of spiritual teachers and healers. These teachers believe that this experience can help people to release old wounds, traumas, and fears. It can also help people to connect with their true selves and to awaken their spiritual potential.

The Process of Baptism in Liquid Fire

The process of baptism in liquid fire typically involves lying down on a bed of hot coals. The coals are heated to a temperature of around 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit. As you lie on the coals, you will feel the heat penetrate your body.

At first, the heat may be uncomfortable. However, as you relax into the experience, you will begin to feel a sense of peace and relaxation. The heat will help to release tension and stress from your body.

As you continue to lie on the coals, you may experience visions or other altered states of consciousness. These experiences can be very profound and can lead to a deep understanding of yourself and your life.

After you have finished your baptism, you will typically feel a sense of renewal and rejuvenation. You may feel more connected to yourself and to the world around you. You may also feel more confident and empowered to live your life with purpose and passion.
