Symbolism Analysis: Unveiling the Hidden Meanings

WHAT IS SYMBOLISM?

SYMBOLISM DEFINITION

- Symbolism is the idea of using a symbol to represent a meaning, idea or quality. The symbols that are given do not have the same literal meaning as the thing about which they are referring.
- Using symbolism gives the speaker or writer the opportunity to describe something in a more poetic fashion rather than simply saying what they mean outright. It can be used to express an emotion or something which is a more general idea, for example, a dove is the symbol of peace or a rose is the symbol of romance and love.
- There are some words which are used in a symbolic sense which may have more than one meaning, for example, a chain. This can sometimes refer to being imprisoned but can also be used to symbolise a union.
- In some cases, symbolism can mean different things to different people, depending on how they interpret it. However, in most cases, symbolism is generally understood by the masses to have the same meaning.

Symbolism in Everyday Language

- An olive branch is used to symbolise a truce. "I offered her an olive branch after our big fight as I did not want to be at odds with her."
- Black is the symbol of death. "The funeral was full of people wearing black suits."
- The dove is used to symbolise peace. "The countries declared a peace treaty by the releasing of a hundred doves."
- A red rose is used to symbolise love and romance. "He handed her a red rose and she knew at the moment how he felt."
- The owl is a symbol for wisdom and being sage. "My grandfather is just like an owl, he always knows the right thing to advise me when I am struggling in life."

SYMBOLISM EXAMPLES

Symbolism in Writing

- Ah, sunflower by William Blake. This famous poem uses a sunflower to symbolise a human being. It is used as follows: "Ah sunflower, who counts the steps of the sun."
- Wild daisies by Sarah Teasdale. In this poem, the following sentence uses the symbols of daisies and spring to represent youth. "In spring time, I asked of the daisies, if his word was true."
- The rain by William H Davies. This poem features symbolism in the form of using leaves to symbolise the various social classes. "I hear leaves drinking rain, and hear rich leaves on the top."
- Harry Potter by JK Rowling. In the series of books about the boy wizard, Harry Potter, symbolism is used in the form of the scar on Harry's forehead. The scar symbolises his bravery.

Tucker's narrative is peppered with evocative symbolism that enriches the story's meaning and adds layers of depth to its characters' experiences. The protagonist's fascination with her lover's wedding ring serves as a tangible reminder of the forbidden nature of their affair, weighing heavily on her conscience.

Colors play a significant role in the story, with red symbolizing passion, desire, and danger. The protagonist's crimson lipstick becomes a symbol of her bold defiance, while the blood-red roses her lover gives her hint at the potential consequences of their actions.

The recurring motif of mirrors reflects the characters' inner struggles and the fractured nature of their identities. The protagonist's reflection becomes a constant reminder of her deception, while her lover's gaze in the mirror exposes his wavering resolve.
