The Man Who Lived in a Tree

In 2012, a man named John Baumgartner moved into a tree in the backyard of his home in St. Paul, Minnesota. He lived there for 21 years, until he was finally evicted by the city in 2014. Baumgartner said he moved into the tree because he was tired of living in a house and wanted to be closer to nature. He built a platform in the tree and lived there year-round, even during the cold Minnesota winters.

Baumgartner's story is a reminder that there are always people living outside the mainstream. He was a unique individual who found happiness and fulfillment in a way that most people would find strange. His story is a testament to the human spirit and the power of individuality.

The Woman Who Married Her Cat

In 2014, a woman named Michelle Lewis married her cat, Puss Puss, in a ceremony in Honolulu, Hawaii. The couple exchanged vows and rings, and Puss Puss wore a white dress for the occasion. Lewis said she married Puss Puss because she loved him and wanted to spend the rest of her life with him.

Lewis's story is a reminder that love can come in many forms. She found happiness and companionship with her cat, and their relationship is no less valid than any other.

The Man Who Drank His Own Urine

In 2015, a man named David Earle claimed to have been drinking his own urine for over 30 years. He said that drinking his urine helped him to stay healthy and energetic. Earle's story is controversial, and there is no scientific evidence to support his claims. However, his story is a reminder that people will believe anything if they want to.

The Woman Who Claimed to Be Jesus Christ

In 2016, a woman named Inri Cristo claimed to be the reincarnation of Jesus Christ. She said that she had come back to Earth to save humanity. Cristo's claims were widely ridiculed, but she attracted a small following of believers. She died in 2019.

Cristo's story is a reminder that there are always people who will believe in the most outlandish claims. Her followers believed that she was the reincarnation of Jesus Christ, and they were willing to follow her even though there was no evidence to support her claims.
